City of Kotzebue

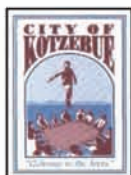

"Gateway to the Arctic"

Kotzebue, "Kikiktagruk or Qikiqtagruk" is built on a spit approximately three miles long and between 1,100 and 3,600 feet in width 28 miles above the Arctic Circle. The site has been inhabited by the Inupiat Eskimos for at least 600 years. Centuries before European explorer, Otto Von Kotzebue visited the area, "Kikiktagruk" was a busy trading center and the hub of ancient trading routes.

This Second Class City, with a population of 3,130 is the urban center for all the villages in the northwest region, with a healthy cash economy, a growing private sector and a variety of public service agencies.

The three major river systems that drain into the Kotzebue Sound - the Noatak, Kobuk and Selawik - are easily accessible from Kotzebue and has, therefore, become the transfer point between ocean and inland shipping. Kotzebue is also the air transport center for the region.

Enjoy Kotzebue, thank you!
